

HOUSE RANSACKED BY BOLD THIEVES

Home of J. L. Blair on North Ewing Street Searched From Basement to Attic.

ROBBERS LEAVE NO CLEWS

Silverware in Buffet is Not Molested and Valuable Jewelry is Refused.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Blair on North Ewing street was entered by thieves early this morning and thoroughly ransacked from garret to cellar. The contents of chiffoniers, bureaus, washstands and the buffet were scattered over the floor, showing that the thieves had taken their time in searching the house and had examined carefully everything they could find. Because of the condition of the house, it was impossible to tell what articles were missing, although there is every indication that some loot was taken away.

The theft was discovered shortly after one o'clock this afternoon by Mr. Blair when he returned home from a week's trip. He is engaged as a traveling man and left home Saturday and had not been in the house since. Mrs. Blair has been at Chesterfield for the past four weeks and has not been informed of the burglary. The robbers left no clew by which they may be apprehended.

The search of the house was one of the most complete ever reported to the local police department. Every nook and corner in the residence was ransacked as shown by the articles thrown upon the floor. Small packages, boxes and jewel cases were opened and the surprising feature of the robbery is that considerable silverware, gold jewelry and other valuable articles were not stolen. Mr. Blair made a hasty examination of his papers and legal documents but was unable to find any of them missing. It is believed, however, that a number of articles were carried away as a dozen or more linen towels were stolen and it is thought that these were used to wrap up the loot.

It is thought the burglars entered the yard through the alley gate as this was standing open this morning. When Mrs. Blair left on her vacation precaution was taken to close this gate and the hook was fastened with wire. The robbers gained entrance into the cellar by removing a pane of glass from the window so that the latch could be thrown. The door leading from the cellar into the kitchen was locked but the burglars cut a small hole in the panel and by means of a bent piece of brass were able to turn the key. When once in the kitchen they had little trouble in reaching the other rooms.

One strange feature of the robbery was that the drawer in the buffet which contained the silverware was not molested. This drawer was locked and the key concealed under a coverlet, but the thieves evidently did not find it. The contents of the other drawers in the sideboard were opened and thoroughly searched.

After ransacking the rooms on the first floor, the robbers went up stairs where they continued their work with even greater detail. Nothing escaped them in the bedrooms where various articles were strewn on the floor. It is not known what kind of loot the robbers were after for several valuable pieces of jewelry were found. Several old coins belonging to Mr. Blair were missing but the burglars were careful to select only United States money. Scores of foreign coins were examined and refused. Mr. Blair is unable to give a list of all the missing articles.

The burglars helped themselves to a supply of cigars and before leaving the house one of them put on a new pair of hose. The old pair was found in the kitchen. It is not probable that these will furnish any clew to the guilty parties as there is nothing about them to identify the owner.

It is thought that the burglary was committed early this morning as the dog, which was kept in the rear yard, escaped through the gate. A few tracks were seen near the alley gate but these were not sufficient to furnish a clew. Neighbors declare that they heard no unusual noises about the house at any time during the night. Some of the neighbors were on their porches until 11 o'clock and saw no light about the house. All the window shades were drawn but had the room been lighted the reflection could have been seen through the shades.

COUNCIL'S ORDER MUST BE FOLLOWED

Delay in Inspection of Gas Mains on Streets Being Improved Will Not be Tolerated.

LEAKY CONNECTIONS FOUND

Claimed That Inter-state Public Service Company Failed to Complete Examination.

The apparent delay of the Inter-state Public Service Company to inspect the gas mains on North Walnut and South Chestnut streets with the view of placing them in first class condition before the streets are permanently improved, in accordance with the order of the city council, brought forth a storm of bitter criticism at the regular meeting of the council Thursday night. It was explained that it is very important that the mains be examined and repaired, if needed, before the streets are paved so that it will not be necessary to tear them up after the contract is completed. Some of the mains on North Walnut street have been inspected and it is reported, the connections were found to be in a rusted and leaky condition. The council fears that if the inspection is delayed much longer the contract will be held up several weeks, but it is not in favor of completing the streets until the mains are in good condition.

Shortly after it was voted to improve the streets the council ordered the public utilities companies to inspect the mains and if repairs were necessary to make them without delay. It was stated at the council meeting that the Seymour Water

"SKEETER" M'BRIDE VIOLATES PAROLE

Sent to Jeffersonville Reformatory From This County—Captured By Seymour Firemen.

REARRESTED AT MITCHELL

Believed That He Knows Something About Reed Robbery—McQueen With Him.

Joseph L. McBride, who was sent to the Indiana State Reformatory from this county about two years ago for petit larceny and was paroled after serving a year, has been returned to Jeffersonville because he violated his parole at Mitchell. McBride and Harry McQueen were arrested by the fire department after they had robbed several stores in this city. They were captured at the entrance of James Phillips' saloon. Fireman Jerrell was holding McBride and Chief Everhart had charge of McQueen. Jerrell and McBride engaged in a scuffle during which McBride pulled a big gun from his pocket and in order to assist Jerrell Chief Everhart let McQueen go. He ran and was captured near St. Louis several months afterwards. A reward of $35 was offered for his arrest.

After McQueen was returned to the Jackson county jail he escaped and has never been apprehended. McBride was first charged with burglary which carries a sentence of from ten to twenty years, but was later charged with petit larceny.

McBride and McQueen were at Mitchell Tuesday night and tried to escape from the marshal. McBride carried a revolver with him but did not use the weapon. He was arrested after a long chase but McQueen, who is wanted here, escaped. It is believed that the men had a hand in robbing the safe at Reed's meat market at Mitchell.

The following article is taken from the Bedford Mail and gives an account of McBride's arrest.

To establish an alibi and to save her sweetheart from being returned to the Jeffersonville reformatory, a Bedford girl this morning told Prosecutor John Underwood that she and Joe L. (Skeeter) McBride had registered at the Bowles hotel at Bloomington under an assumed name Saturday evening and had remained there until Sunday morning.

McBride, who was released last December from the Jeffersonville reformatory on parole after having served a portion of a sentence for burglary, was arrested at Mitchell Wednesday on suspicion of having been implicated in the safe blowing at the E. M. Reed & Co., meat market. More than $300 was secured by the burglars.

McBride ran when the officers approached him, but was later captured and a thirty-two caliber revolver was found wrapped up in a package. McBride plead guilty to the charge of carrying concealed weapons and paid the fine and costs amounting to $35. He was immediately brought to this city and placed in jail.

Strenuous efforts were made by rel-

AUTOMOBILE FEES TO REACH $135,000

Owners of Machines in This City Interested in Report From Secretary of State's Office.

DELAY IN TAG SHIPMENTS

Thousands of Applications on File—Revenue From Tax to Be Used on Public Highways.

Owners of automobiles and motorcycles in Seymour who have paid the required license fees have been expecting a report from the office of the secretary of state relative to the total amount collected. According to an estimate of Herman Conter, deputy secretary of state, at least $135,000 will be collected this year. $11,000 has already been received and deposited with the secretary of state.

The sum of $135,000, which he expects to be collected before the close of the year, does not, however, represent the amount of money that will be collected from this source next year or thereafter, because the new automobile license law only went into effect on July 1, this year, and the fees collected this year are for only the remaining part of the year to December 31. This means that taxes paid and dated July 1, this year, were only one-half of the amount which will be collected next year, and when a license is issued for only the remaining three months of the year it will cost only one-fourth of the yearly amount fixed by law.

It is estimated by Mr. Conter that the annual income from automobile taxes will amount to not less than $350,000 to $400,000. All of this money, under the law, goes to the various counties of the state, the state acting merely as collector and custodian of the funds. The law says that all of this money must be spent on the roads and that it cannot be used for any other purpose. It is divided in three parts and is distributed by the state as follows:

One part is divided equally among the ninety-two counties.

One part is divided between the counties in proportion to the amount of free gravel road in each county.

One part is divided among the counties in proportion to the amount that is received from each county in automobile taxes.

The office of secretary of state is still working hard to catch up with the demand for automobile number tags. Thousands of applications are still on file and have been there for weeks. About fifteen thousand number tags have been sent out thus far and thousands more would have been sent out but for the fact that the manufacturers of the tags delayed the shipments. This week, a carload of tags were received, numbering about twenty thousand, and the force of clerks in the office will send out these as rapidly as possible. About three thousand a day are now being sent out.

It is estimated that there are about forty thousand to fifty thousand automobiles and motorcycles in In-

SUES TO RECOVER $200 PAID INTO RELIEF DEPARTMENT.

C. M. Poston Filed Suit in Lawrence Circuit Court Against B. & O. Southwestern.

Charles M. Poston, formerly of this city, has filed suit in the Lawrence circuit court against the B. & O. S. W. railway for damages in the sum of $200. The complaint alleges that plaintiff was at one time an engineer employed by the above company but after three years' service was discharged for being color blind. Plaintiff further alleges that while in the employ of the above named company he was compelled, according to a rule in existence on that road, to join what is known as their relief department and that as a member of such department he was compelled to pay monthly dues of $4. The total amount paid in by him during his service on the road is alleged to have been $138, and he claims that he never received any benefits whatever therefrom. He asks that the court render judgment in his favor in the sum of $200.

INTERURBAN MEN PRESENT DEMANDS

Seven Articles in "Grievance" Petition Prepared by Conductors and Motormen.

OFFICIALS IGNORED THEM

Chester P. Wilson, of I. C. & S. Line, Only Official Who Accepted List for Consideration.

Indianapolis, Aug. 15.—Officials of Indiana traction companies are ignoring a list of "grievances" which has been presented to them by a committee of trainmen representing the "Three Star" organization, which is endeavoring to unionize motormen and conductors on the lines of the state. The officials contend that they do not recognize the union of which they say they know nothing, and do not believe that it has any standing.

Chester P. Wilson, vice-president of the Inter-state Public Service Company, which controls the Indianapolis, Columbus & Southern line, was the only official who received the "grievances" officially.

He told the committee the matter would be referred to the board of directors of the road. It is understood that whatever organization the union has been able to effect has been chiefly on the L. C. & S. line.

The "grievances" as they were named by the trainmen's committee were presented to the officials by a committee of five, purporting to represent the men on each interurban line running into the city. There are seven articles in the petition asking for a wage scale of 30 cents for the first year and 35 cents thereafter; the reinstatement of men who had been discharged for joining the union; a nine-hour working day; time and one-half pay for extra time; freight trains to be in the charge of a motorman, a conductor and one brakeman; trains consisting of more than one car to have three men in a crew, and all passenger trains carrying express or other merchandise to have a three-man crew.

The petition was signed by M. J. Coons, J. B. Lingenfelter, Elmer Shortridge, A. E. Pitch and W. L. Maloney. They demanded that an answer be made by the roads before 4 o'clock Sunday morning.

APOLOGIZES TO GREAT BRITAIN

President Disclaims Ambassador Wilson's Statement.

DELIVERS A CUTTING REBUKE

In Disavowing Ambassador Wilson's Action in Matter Which Was Subject of British Explanation and Disclaiming All Responsibility For Language Used by the Ambassador, the President Doesn't Mince His Words.

Washington, Aug. 15.—For his action in issuing a statement criticizing the British foreign office, President Wilson has severely reprimanded Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson. The president and Secretary Bryan seriously considered summarily dismissing the ambassador from the diplomatic service, but finally decided upon the reprimand. The rebuke to the ambassador was in the form of an apology by this government to the British foreign office and a public statement by Secretary Bryan.

It is believed here that President Wilson's sole reason for not dismissing the ambassador is that he is loath to give him the freedom to talk on Mexican affairs which dismissal would carry. By retaining Mr. Wilson in the state department service on a leave of absence status, the president may rely upon the ambassador's sense of his official duty to restrain himself from talking freely on the matters of which he has such an intimate knowledge. In the dispatch carrying the apology to the British foreign office the president disclaims all responsibility for Mr. Wilson's action in the matter and for the language employed by him in his interview and "regrets exceedingly" that a diplomatic official in the employ of this government should have been guilty of such an improper action.

In making public this dispatch Secretary Bryan added that the president does not go further at this time "because he takes it for granted that the action which he has been obliged to take in this matter will be to him a sufficient reminder of his official duties."

Ambassador Wilson, it is believed, would have preferred actual dismissal to the humiliating reprimand which he has been forced to swallow because he spoke out in answer to what he thought to be a reflection upon him by the British foreign office. He has repeatedly requested that his resignation which was put in the hands of the president in March he accepted, and it was only at the request of the president that he consented to take the usual two months leave of absence before terminating his connection with the foreign service of the United States.

The ambassador has some very decided views on Mexican affairs, which differ from those of the president, and it is believed would not be averse to having an opportunity to air them without feeling any bonds of official restraint. He has, however, maintained the strictest silence on Mexican matters since the president accepted his resignation to take effect in October.

The statement of the British foreign office which aroused Ambassador Wilson to issue his statement was made in explanation of the purpose of Great Britain in recognizing the Huerta government. The statement called attention to the fact that the recognition had been only that of a provisional government pending an election and ended with this paragraph:

"The French and German governments also recognized Huerta after a reception by him of the whole diplomatic party at which a congratulatory speech was made in their behalf by the American ambassador."

Ambassador Wilson considered that this statement by inference questioned the correctness of his action at the reception and intimated that it was partly on the strength of this speech that Great Britain had extended recognition. He was angered by it, and in his own statement characterized it as a rank subterfuge unworthy of the traditions of the foreign office. He asserted that the speech which he delivered at the reception was written not by himself but by the English and Spanish ministers at Mexico City.

The ambassador believed that in making his statement he was acting well within his own rights and diplomatic usage as well.

SENATE AGREES TO WILSON'S PROGRAM

Currency Legislation Assured At This Session.

Washington, Aug. 15.—Expectation of a recess of congress after the tariff bill is passed or for the postponement of currency legislation until the regular session in December, disappeared last night when the Democratic caucus of the senate adopted a resolution recommending to congress that currency legislation be taken up as soon as the tariff bill is out of the way. The action of the caucus was the result of insistence on the part of President Wilson that this program be followed. Many Democrats in the senate yielded to the president's wishes against their own desires.

It is acknowledged that the action of the caucus probably has created a situation which will prolong the consideration of the tariff bill in the senate indefinitely and keep congress in continuous session throughout the fall, merging the special into the regular December session. This is the deliberate judgment of the leaders on both sides of the senate chamber. The general estimate put forward today as to the time that will be consumed in consideration of the tariff bill carries it up well toward the first of October.

An Accident, Says Coroner.

Indianapolis, Aug. 15.—George Reagan, sixty-six years old, was killed when he was run over by a traction car at Bridgeport. The body was brought to the city morgue. Several sons live in Indianapolis. Mr. Reagan was deaf and, according to a witness of the accident, the car crew was in no way to blame for the death.

Murdered Girl Unidentified.

New York, Aug. 15.—The body of the young woman found in the woods at Spuyten Duyvil Sunday night, has not yet been identified. A cheap, handled pocketknife found near the body is believed to have been the weapon with which the killing was done.

TERSE TELEGRAMS

Few internal events in America have attracted so much attention in the French press as the proposed impeachment of Governor Sulzer of New York.

For the purpose of placing 75,000 Bibles in New England hotels, $25,000 was raised by the Gideons in their national convention at Old Orchard, Me.

Two negroes accused of killing a man and a boy in disputes over watermelons, were taken from officers and lynched by a mob near Paul's Valley, Okla.

Nine men were killed and one fatally injured at the Coronado mine near Clifton, Ariz., when a cable pin snapped and two cars dashed down a steep grade.

The body of William Jones, probate court clerk of Cleveland, O., who had been missing since July 29, was recovered from Lake Erie. It is believed he fell off a boat.

The San Francisco Call, owned by John D. Spreckels, has been bought by M. H. DeYoung, proprietor of the San Francisco Chronicle, and will go out of existence on Sept. 1.

Four men were plunged to death at Memphis when a temporary structure on which they were working in repairing the Mississippi river bridge gave way and fell 100 feet.

Militant suffragettes tried to burn the county schools at Carnarvon, Wales. Fires were started in several places, but were extinguished, though considerable damage was done.

Tom Lawson announced that he will be one of twenty-five men to contribute $100,000 each, if necessary, to a huge fund to back Governor Sulzer of New York in a finish fight with Tammany Hall.

New York gangsters shot and killed a member of the "Sullivan street gang" on Thirty-first street, and three policemen and a detective within two blocks were unable to catch sight of the murderer.

TWO GOVERNORS HOLD THE FORT

Sulzer and Glynn Both On the Job at Albany.

STATE MACHINERY IS TANGLED

Just Who Is Governor of New York Is a Question That Is Perplexing the Officials of the Empire State to the Point of Distraction and Which, Unless Soon Settled, Will Paralyze the State's Official Machinery.

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 15.—Today Governor Martin H. Glynn will send to Governor William Sulzer a letter demanding that the impeached Mr. Sulzer surrender his office. It is expected that Mr. Sulzer will answer the demand by handing Mr. Glynn's messenger a letter saying that Mr. Sulzer is governor and will continue to act as such unless the court of appeals rules against him. Such a letter is all ready.

Governor Sulzer started a test of his own powers by signing a requisition for the extradition of a prisoner to West Virginia. The prisoner wanted in West Virginia is now locked up in New York city charged with passing a bad check. Deputy Sheriff Bartels of Martinsburg, W. Va., came to the capitol late yesterday afternoon and asked Mr. Glynn to sign the requisition. Mr. Glynn told him he would not do it unless Mr. Sulzer refused to sign it himself. The sheriff then went to Mr. Sulzer's office and got Mr. Sulzer's signature. When the sheriff went back upstairs to the lieutenant governor's office, Mr. Glynn refused to add his signature to that of Mr. Sulzer. So the pilgrim from West Virginia, vowing that nobody in Albany knew who was governor of the state and that a man who had traveled so far ought to be more courteously treated, left for New York. He said that he would ask Mayor Gaynor to order the acting police commissioner to honor the signature of William Sulzer and allow the prisoner to be taken back to Martinsburg. So it may be that Mayor Gaynor, an ex-supreme court justice, will have the job of deciding which of the state's two governors is the right one.

The importance of all this extradition fuss from the standpoint of Mr. Sulzer is that it may be the means of bringing his fight before the United States courts, that it would be for the federal courts to decide who is the lawful governor of New York. There was every evidence that Governor Glynn is not worried as to the strength of his position. His only question was as to how to start the machinery which would prove his right to be governor. To help him in a decision he called in several lawyers who are long-time friends. They will act as counsel until the issue is settled.

The great seal of the state is locked up in the safe of the secretary of state, Mitchell May. Mr. May says that if Mr. Glynn asks for it, it will be delivered to him, but that if Mr. Sulzer asks for it the request will be submitted to the office of the attorney general. Mr. Glynn has signed no state papers and will make no attempt to perform any function of the governorship until after his letter is sent to Mr. Sulzer.

Mr. Sulzer posed twice for photographs standing beside a floral horse shoe five feet high, which was conspicuously labeled "From the People." He has had some sleep and looks all right. Mrs. Sulzer is better, but is still seriously ill. Her three sisters were sent away to the mountains from the people's house in order that she might have a complete rest.

When Patrick E. McCabe, clerk of the senate, served on Mr. Sulzer the articles and notice of impeachment and a summons to appear before the impeachment court on Sept. 18, the contending governor threw them on his table and said "All right."

According to a close friend of Mr. Sulzer he sincerely believes that the court of appeals will decide in his favor and that, failing that, the impeachment court will find him guilty. If instead he is declared guilty and removed from office he will retire to a little home somewhere, start a small newspaper and devote himself to "exposing" Tammany and breaking its control of the state.

These are the main developments and declarations in the astonishing situation in Albany.

ORIGIN OF BRYAN'S SEAL

Secretary of State Adopts an Ancient Macedonian Coin.

Washington, Aug. 15.—Secretary of State Bryan has received a letter from the British ambassador communicating to him an expert opinion on the origin of the coin which the secretary has adopted as his personal seal for state department papers. The ambassador had written to the curator of coins of the British museum for the opinion.

It was learned that the coin was a silver drachma, widely circulated at the time of Philip III of Macedonia, who was the half-brother of Alexander the Great and ruled in the Fourth century B. C. One face of the coin shows the headless Apollo with hand extended, upon which a dove is perched. It was the dove that attracted Mr. Bryan, and he has thought it especially fitting that the coin should be used to seal his peace treaties.

LOLA NORRIS TELLS OF THAT RENO TRIP

Further Evidence in the Case Against Diggs.

San Francisco, Aug. 15.—In the Diggs white slavery trial Lola Norris, the companion of Drew Caminetti, took the witness stand and fully corroborated Marsha Warrington's story that it was by means of intimidation and threats that both girls were induced to leave their homes and go to Reno. She gave the strongest evidence of the fear they were laboring under and which for the time overcame their love of home and their desire to keep secret their relations with the married men. She also swore solemnly that she was a virtuous girl until she was debauched by Caminetti at Reno. This declaration she made despite the facts brought out the day before that she spent a night in this city with Caminetti at a hotel. She declared she protested when Diggs took Marsha Warrington into one room and locked the connecting door and that she never undressed, and sat up all night in a chair and even refused to allow Caminetti to kiss her during that night.

She gave damaging testimony corroborative of the government's contention that Marsha Warrington and herself were systematically intimidated by threats of the defendant and his indicted associate into taking the Reno trip. Permitted to tell the jury her story in her own way, Miss Norris in narrative form disclosed every incident connected with the elopement, from the inception of the plan to the arrest of the quartet in the Reno bungalow.

In every instance Miss Norris corroborated the testimony of Miss Warrington with relation to the intimidation of herself and her chum, and in detail told of Diggs's promise to marry Miss Warrington and of a similar promise made to her by Caminetti. The weddings, according to her, were to follow the Reno visit, as soon as the defendant and his associate could arrange divorces from their wives. The trial cannot be completed before Tuesday or Wednesday of next week, when the Caminetti trial will follow.

THESE EMPLOYERS FINED

Logansport Men Charged With Violating Child Labor Law.

Logansport, Ind., Aug. 15.—George Strecker, a baker, against whom six charges of violation of the state child labor law were filed, following the killing of Leland Warner, aged thirteen, on the freight elevator in the Strecker bakery Monday, entered pleas of guilty in the court of H. L. Fousts, justice of the peace. Fines and costs were assessed against him amounting to $210. George Mulcahey, a cigar maker, pleaded guilty to the two charges filed against him for employing as strippers girls less than sixteen years old, and was fined $66.90.

Edgar A. Perkins, state factory inspector, who filed the charges, said the practice of employing children in Logansport factories must stop.

PREPARING FOR INDIANA EXHIBIT

State to Be Represented at Conservation Exposition.

WILL MAKE A GOOD SHOWING

In Addition to a Comprehensive Exhibit of Native Woods, Stone and Clay, There Will Be Exhibits at the Coming National Exposition at Knoxville to Show What This State Is Doing Along Lines of Conservation.

Indianapolis, Aug. 15.—Indiana is to be well represented at the National Conservation exposition, to be held throughout September and October in Knoxville, Tenn. This state will have an exhibit of native woods, limestone, clays and shales, brick, roof tiling, pottery, coal and crushed stone or road material.

Edward Barrett, state geologist, has returned from Knoxville, where he made arrangements for the Indiana exhibit, for which more space has been assigned in the building for minerals than to any other state. The state museum is to be drawn on in preparing the Indiana exhibit. The exhibit of woods in the museum is now being packed preparatory to shipping. This exhibit, showing specimens of many trees now almost extinct for commercial purposes, will teach a lesson in conservation, Mr. Barrett said.

In addition to the articles contributed by the state there will be in the Indiana exhibit samples of the products of thirty clay, stone and coal companies. The Indiana state board of health has been invited to send its "big fly" to the exposition. The fly, first shown at an exhibit held a year ago at Washington, measures seven feet in length and astride its back is a human skeleton. "Death rides the fly" is a significant inscription borne by the enlarged fly.

COMPROMISE FORCED ON HOUSE LEADERS

"Corn Tassel" Currency Advocates Gain Point.

Washington, Aug. 15.—Conservative Democratic leaders are making the admission that the radicals who have presented amendments in the house caucus demanding recognition in the administration banking bill of agricultural paper as a basis for the issuance of currency or the creation of a credit, practically have won a victory.

Notwithstanding the statement issued by President Wilson urging that the question of agricultural credits should not be agitated in connection with the pending bill, the fight in caucus hinges on the Ragsdale-Henry amendments, which propose to give warehouse certificates issued against agricultural staples the same standing as a basis for currency or credit, as "prime commercial paper." A compromise on this question that will draw to the support of the administration bill a number of Democrats who have been won over in the last few days by the arguments of the radicals, is now in the process of making. In fact, a concrete amendment by way of compromise was proposed by Representative Underwood, the Democratic leader, who reached the conclusion that unless concessions were made the administration either would be rejected in caucus or go to the house with the support of only a slim majority.

TWO LEAVE RESERVATION

Louisiana Senators Vote With Republicans Against Free Wheat.

Washington, Aug. 15.—Another close vote was recorded in the senate on a proposed amendment to the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill. The finance committee was sustained in its action in putting wheat on the free list by only five majority, the vote being 37 to 32. All the Republicans voted against free wheat and were reinforced by two Democrats—Senators Thornton and Ransdell of Louisiana. Immediately following the adoption of the committee amendment for free wheat, Senator Gronna of North Dakota proposed an amendment proposing a duty of 6 cents per bushel. This amendment was lost, 37 to 31, the two Louisiana senators voting again with the Republicans.

The opening game of the world's series will be played Oct. 6.

DEATH'S DOOM HEARD, SHE'S ENTIRELY WELL

MRS. SARAH E. FOUST

Restored to health after a harrowing experience with tuberculosis, in the course of which she was confined to her bed and weighed only 75 pounds, Mrs. Sarah E. Foust, living near Indianapolis, is one of the happiest women in Christendom. She thought her "time had come," but thanks to Nature's Creation, she is again at her stand in the Indianapolis market and feeling fine.

"In November, 1911, I took down with the grippe," she writes. "From that it went into pneumonia and finally the doctor pronounced my case tuberculosis. I was confined to my bed, coughed badly, had night sweats, severe pains, hemorrhages, and fell off in weight until I didn't weigh more than seventy-five pounds. In fact, the doctor gave me no hope, and told my daughter it would be wonderful if I lived until spring."

"Nature's Creation had been recommended to us a number of times, but we didn't think much of it, but after I had been bedfast for six weeks, we decided to take it as a last resort. On account of my advanced condition they did not give us any false hopes."

"After I began taking the medicine, I coughed a great deal and expectorated great quantities of corruption. I could feel my lungs clearing up. My strength gradually returned and I improved slowly, but steadily. In several months I could sit up in a chair and later was able to go out. The choking spells left and the cough decreased. The fever disappeared and my lungs healed. I continued with the medicine for a little over a year and am feeling fine to-day. I weigh one hundred and fifteen pounds, which is more than my usual weight. I have a stand in the market and have been working there for the last week, which is the first time since a year ago last November. I will gladly tell any one what Nature's Creation has done for me or give whatever information I can. Mrs. Sarah E. Foust, R. F. D. No. 35, Howland Station, Indianapolis, Indiana."

Booklet containing full information regarding the use of Nature's Creation in the treatment of tuberculosis and the conditions which lead to it, such as bronchitis, impure blood, run down system and asthma, is being distributed free of all charge by M. L. Haymann, 417 State Life Building, Indianapolis, Indiana. This booklet also contains photos and testimonials from local parties. Write for a copy TO-DAY.

WHERE SHALL WE GO TO GET IT?

"Don't go! Come right here"—say the merchants of this town in today's REPUBLICAN.

Right now they are cleaning their August stocks and planning what they shall offer you at Christmas.

The steamers and trains are bringing in your fall attire—planned long ago.

But the important part in the merchant's fall and winter plans is to start with fresh, new goods.

He must sell what he has right now. That's why August is a month of unusually retail sales. Better clear shelves and a temporary loss, than capital tied up in summer merchandise.

It pays to watch the advertising every day in the year, but it will never pay you better than right now in this month of August.

The time to buy is when the other fellow is anxious to sell and never are the merchants offering better inducements than now.

30,000 VOICES!

And Many Are the Voices of Seymour People.

Thirty thousand voices—What a grand chorus! And that's the number of American men and women who are publicly praising Doan's Kidney and bladder pills. They say it to friends. They tell it in the home papers. Seymour people are in this chorus. Here's a Seymour case:

L. C. Thomas, stock dealer, 119 S. Lynn St., Seymour, Ind., says, "I cannot say that I have had a moment's freedom from backache and kidney trouble until just lately when I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills. I had been suffering from a dull, heavy pain in the small of my back and had a tired, nervous feeling that clung to me for days at a time. My kidneys were disordered and caused me much trouble. The many statements I read in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills led me to try them. They lived up to representations and soon brought relief. Whenever I feel in need of a tonic for my kidneys, I use Doan's Kidney Pills with good results."

TELLS OF PROPER METHOD TO HANDLE MILK IN THE HOME

Department of Agriculture Issues
Bulletin Urging Need of Care to Prevent Disease.

With a view to reducing the prevalence of intestinal troubles, particularly in children, arising from unclean milk, the department of agriculture has issued a bulletin containing instructions on the proper care of the fluid in the home.

"No matter how carefully milk is handled between the farm and the home, or in how pure a state it is delivered at the domestic ice box, it quickly can become an undesirable food if carelessly handled in the home," the statement says. "Milk that is left for only a short time in summer heat may become unfit for use. Milk must be kept cool to prevent the bacteria already in it, and which may get in it by accident, from multiplying to a point where the milk is undesirable."

"Milk should be taken into the house and put in the refrigerator as soon after delivery as possible. If it is impossible to have the bottles of milk put immediately in the refrigerator, provide on the porch a box containing a lump of ice."

"In planning a house, arrange to have the refrigerator set in the wall, with an opening on the outside. It is always possible to provide locks for these boxes, or refrigerator doors, and supply the milkman with one key."

"The interior of the food compartment should be wiped every day with a clean cloth and thoroughly scalded as often as once a week."

"Under no circumstances should the drain pipe of an ice box be connected with a sewer."

"The milk should be kept in the original bottle and the bottle left in the refrigerator until needed. Before use the neck of the bottle and the cap should be washed and then carefully wiped with a clean cloth before the cap is removed. Remove the cap with a sharp pointed instrument, so as not to push the cap down into the milk."

"Once a bottle is opened it should be kept covered, both to keep out dirt and bacteria and to prevent the absorption of undesirable odors."

"The original cap should not be replaced. Instead place an inverted cup or tumbler on top of the bottle."

"The milk should be used from the bottle as needed, and any unused milk should not be returned to the bottle after having been poured into another vessel."

"Do not let milk stand in a warm room on the table any longer than is necessary."

"Do not place milk in a refrigerator compartment with onions or other food having a strong odor."

"Before returning the bottles to the milkman, wash them first in cold water and then in warm water."

AUTOMOBILE FEES TO REACH $135,000

diana that must be registered and tags issued.

Under the law the secretary of state collects all of this money and issues all licenses and tags. The law says that all money received therefrom shall be deposited with the treasurer of state and apportioned as stated above, after all expenses for number tags, registration and all assistants necessary to do the work have been paid. A large force of new clerks has been placed in the secretary's office to do this work, and they are under the direction of Deputy Secretary of State Conter, who is drawing two salaries for the work he does in the office. His regular salary as deputy secretary of state is $2,400 a year. Secretary of State Ellingham wanted to put him in charge of the automobile department, also, and pay him extra for it, and he obtained an opinion from the attorney-general and also from the public accounting department that this would be legal.

Ellingham, therefore, added the automobile work to Conter's other duties, and is paying him $1,500 a year for doing this extra work. This gives Conter $3,900 a year. He draws the two salaries on separate warrants.

The fact that Conter is drawing two salaries—in other words, that he is holding down two jobs—has caused some comment. It is pointed out that there are hundreds of good, hard working, capable Democrats in the state that would be glad to have either of the jobs at the salary of either place, and some of them have been grumbling because one man is holding two jobs while they have none at all. Ellingham answers this criticism by saying that he wanted a man to handle the large amount of automobile tax money whom he could trust and in whom he had full confidence. That was why he chose Conter. And at the same time he wished to retain Conter as his deputy.

When the salary grabs were before the legislature last winter an effort was made to increase Conter's salary from $2,400 to $3,200, but it failed.

Some Corn—This.

J. S. Atwood of Jackson township, Shelby county, claims the record for fast growing corn. July 29, he planted a field of eight acres of yellow corn and Thursday he brought a mess of roasting ears he had picked from the field, to his son in Shelbyville. The corn grew and matured in sixteen days. Mr. Atwood invites all doubters to visit his field and the neighbors vouch for the fact that the grain was planted on the date mentioned.

Sunday School Lesson

SUNDAY, AUG. 17, 1913.

Lesson VII. August 17
CROSSING THE RED SEA. Exod.
13:17 to 14:31.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Before they call,
I will answer.—1st, 65:24.

The story of the Lord's dealings with Israel so long ago is not simply an old story, but an old and true record, with a present application for us and a still future reference to Israel, for according to the days of their coming out of the land of Egypt will the Lord show unto them marvelous things, and the nations shall see and be confounded at all their might (Mic. vii, 15, 16). The whole Bible record from Gen. iii to Rev. xx is that of God working, the devil opposing and man on the side of God or the devil. God always working for man's benefit in spite of his sin. Ingratitude and unbelief. He chose Israel and brought them unto Himself that they might be unto Him a peculiar treasure above all people, a holy people (Ex. xix, 4, 5; Deut. vii, 6). His desire being that other nations might know Him through them.

The same truths hold concerning believers now, but as Israel failed so the church is failing to believe and honor God as she should. May the truths of this lesson help us so to live that others may want to know the Lord because of us. Mark the repeated statements that the Lord brought them out of Egypt that He might bring them into the promised land because of His oath to their fathers (xiii, 3, 5, 9, 11, 14, 16; Deut. vi, 23), and let us stop murmuring and wondering and be quite certain that because of His faithfulness His own can never perish, but will in due time reach His home in glory (John x, 27-29).

Note the reference to the faith and words of Joseph. "God will surely visit you," and see the fulfillment (xiii, 19; Gen. i, 25). God did not lead the people in the most direct way, but He led them about, and though it was a solitary way, it was the right way (Ex. xiii, 17, 18; Ps. cxvii, 4, 7). He seemed to lead into difficulties, for we find them very soon shut in by the sea before them, the Egyptians behind them and the mountains on either side (xiv, 9), but it was to overthrow their enemies and work for them a great deliverance, and so it is always in all His dealings with His own.

The pillar of cloud by day and fire by night by which He led, protected, avenged and delivered them is one of the most striking object lessons in all their history. He never took it away. When necessary it stood behind them, instead of going before them, and became their protector. It was darkness to the Egyptians, but light to Israel (xiii, 21, 22; xiv, 19, 20). The Lord was in it. It was the symbol and assurance of His presence (xiv, 24). Note some of the many references to this wonderful cloud in Ex. xi, 38; Num. ix, 15; x, 34; xiv, 14; Deut. i, 33; Neh. ix, 12, 19; Ps. lxxviii, 14; xcix, 7; cv, 39, and believe that Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, today and forever and loves and cares for you, if you are redeemed, as truly as He did for Israel. Our tendency in time of trouble is to be afraid as Israel was, but the many "fear nots" should quiet us, and we should learn to be still and let Him fight our battles (xiv, 10, 13, 14, 25). See some of the many assurances in Deut. i, 29, 30; iii, 22; xx, 3, 4; 11 Chron. xx, 29.

There is a time to stand still and a time to go forward, a time to be still and a time to act (xiv, 13, 15; Ruth iii, 18; Ps. xlii, 10, 11). Moses was told to divide the sea, but it was the Lord who divided it (verses 16, 21). He works through us and then calls the work ours and gives us credit for it, but it is God who worketh in us both to will and to do (Phil. ii, 13). The sea divided, and all Israel went through on dry land, the waters being a wall unto them on their right hand and on their left (verse 22; xv, 19; Num. xxxiii, 8, 9; Ps. lxxvi, 6; lxxviii, 13; Isa. xlii, 12, 13). The Egyptians pursued and went in after them to the midst of the sea, but by the hand of Moses the sea returned to his strength, and the Lord overthrew the Egyptians in the midst of the sea. There remained not so much as one of them (verses 26-28).

It is said of the plague of flies that when they were removed "there remained not one" (chapter viii, 31), so thoroughly does God work whether against flies or Egyptians. "Thus the Lord saved Israel that day" (xiv, 30), and Israel saw and believed and sang unto the Lord. The Lord Jesus said to Thomas, "Because thou hast seen me thou hast believed; blessed are they that have not seen and yet have believed" (John xx, 29). We are expected to walk by faith, not by sight, but we are too often, like Israel, singing when we see victory and murmuring when we see difficulties.

This overthrow of Israel's enemies is one of the great morning stories of the Bible (verses 24, 25) and makes us think of the morning for which all true believers should be waiting, referred to in 11 Sam. xlii, 4; Ps. xlii, 5 (margin), xlii, 14; cxix, 6. Then shall Israel sing the song of Moses and the Lamb according to Rev. xv. Their shall the Lord come as a man of war, in righteousness to judge the nations, and then shall He reign forever and ever (Ex. xv, 18; Rev. xxi, 11-16; xx, 4). Blessed are all those who can truly say, "The Lord is my strength and song, and He is become my salvation" (Ex. xvi).

SAMPLE BOTTLE OFTEN PROVES BENEFICIAL

STATE BANKS AND TRUST COMPANY FILE REPORTS

Under State Law These Institutions
Required to Give a Statement Upon Call.

Trust companies and state banks doing business in Jackson county have filed their reports with the auditor of state, a call having been issued for such statements. Reports from 346 state banks and 134 trust companies will come to that office in response to the call.

The call asks for statements of the condition of these banks and trust companies at the close of business August 9. Under the Indiana banking law, a call of this kind is issued for reports on the same date on which the controller of the currency calls for statements from national banks. The state banking department has nothing to do with national banks.

There are in Indiana, also, 198 private banks, five savings banks and one mortgage guarantee company which are under the supervision of the state banking department. This makes a total of 684 institutions under the department's supervision. The law requires savings banks to make reports once a year and private banks twice a year. But in addition to these reports all banks and trust companies file reports September 30 in order that the banking department may have the benefit of the information in the compilation of its annual report, which bears that date. September 30 is the close of the state's fiscal year.

A number of private banks have converted themselves into state banks since the enactment of the present banking laws in 1909. These laws changed the system of bank examinations and also changed the fees which the state collects for this service. Under the old law private banks were practically immune from supervision by the banking department and made only occasional reports, and several banks failed or were wrecked by their officers, causing their depositors to lose many thousands of dollars. The new law placed these banks under strict supervision, and thus put them on a better basis, as far as security is concerned.

Mr. Arnold became chief clerk of the banking department on December 1, 1910, less than three years ago, and since that date 125 new banks have been organized in Indiana.

Mr. Arnold has prepared a compilation of the banking laws of Indiana together with all laws which in any manner affect the banking business, and will have the books ready for distribution about September 1. The books will contain the banking laws, the public depositary law, recent court decisions and opinions of the attorney-general affecting the banking business and much other information.

PENALTY FOR "BUTTING IN"

Injured Passenger Got Little Sympathy From Conductor, and Really Did Not Deserve Any.

An unexplained incident with a humorous side occurred at a railroad terminus. A train was drawing out from the station when a man came running along the platform. "Smith! Smith!" he shouted.

In a carriage at the rear of the train sat a passenger, who, hearing the cry, thrust his head out of the window, immediately the runner on the platform struck him a smart blow across the cheek.

Every moment the wheels were revolving more swiftly, and before the injured passenger could call an official the train was clear of the station. He went at once to the conductor.

"What kind of an outrage is this?" he demanded. "Here am I, an innocent passenger, sitting quietly just as the train pulls out of the station. Suddenly a man runs down the platform shrieking 'Smith! Smith!' I look out of the window, and he reaches up and almost knocks my head off! Now, I want to—"

"Pardon me," interrupted the conductor. "Is your name Smith?"

"No, it isn't, and that is just what makes—"

"Well, then, sir, what did you look out of the window for? There wasn't anybody calling you, was there?"

Salt rheum, scaly skin and other itching skin afflictions may be soothed by frequent applications of witch hazel. But the cure must come from the activity of the fine network of blood vessels that make up the skin formation. You should use S. S. S. for the blood. This splendid remedy is a marvel for salt rheum, eczema, lupus, psoriasis and scrofula. Ask at any drug store for a bottle of S. S. S., and you are then on the road to health. The action of this remarkable remedy is direct, positive, certain in its influence. It is one of those rare medical forces which act in the blood with the same degree of certainty that is found in all natural tendencies.

Out through every skin pore acids, germs and other blood impurities are forced in the form of invisible vapor. There is scarcely a community anywhere but what has its living example of the wonderful curative effects of S. S. S. Get a bottle of this famous remedy to-day, and if your case is stubborn or peculiar, write to The Swift Specific Co., 188 Swift Laboratory, Atlanta, Ga.

Beware of all substitutes for S. S. S., the remedy you can depend upon for safety and effectiveness.

REPAIRING GAS MAINS.

It is to be hoped, and the citizens shall expect, that the Inter-state Public Service Company will comply with reasonable promptitude with the notice of the city council, requiring it to inspect the gas mains in the streets that are to be permanently improved and to make any repairs that may be necessary. When the concrete streets are completed it is expected that they will remain for years. All underground work ought to be thoroughly examined and placed in the best of condition. If rusted and leaking pipes are left in the ground and the street is built over them it will be but a question of time until they must be removed. This will necessitate the tearing up of the street, resulting in additional expense and worst of all a scarred and damaged roadway.

A public utilities company is bound by its franchise to keep the mains in good condition. But aside from this reason a company should be interested enough in the welfare of the city that maintains it to further its general advancement. Right at this time the permanent improvement of the streets of Seymour means considerable, and the citizens do not desire that the concrete be torn up in a few years because some company has failed to comply with a reasonable request of the council to perform some act which is rightfully its duty.

The Inter-state Company may be intending to replace or repair the mains. It is reported from an authentic source that the mains are rusty and gas is escaping from the leaking connections. A street should not be built until these are repaired. The mains have been under ground for years and are doubtless showing the result of their long service. Of course an additional expense would be placed on the Inter-state Company, but when it purchased the franchise and property this should have been considered. And again, the work must be done in a few years. The present mains cannot last long and the expense would be no greater then now.

The council need have no fear about the Inter-state Company doing the work. Very likely it is ready and willing to do so at once and the delay has been occasioned while waiting for new supplies. The council is backed by the franchise and the citizens gave the franchise. We do not assert that the delay has been intentional and that the company is endeavoring to slight its duty. But, for the best interests of all concerned it appears that the question is worthy of immediate attention.

Company had made some repairs on the two streets and it was understood that the water mains are in satisfactory condition. The gas mains, it was explained, have been in the ground for years and the connections are rusty and some of them are leaking. The councilmen believe that they should be repaired at once and several methods of compelling the company to do the work were discussed.

Davison suggested that another notice be given the Public Service Company and if the work is not done that the bills filed by the company be withheld until the repairs are made. Sherman Day was of the opinion that if the company refused to comply with the council's request that the city order the mains repaired and then charge the same to the company.

During the discussion it was brought out that the franchise of the company provided that the mains should be kept in good condition and if the company refused to follow this provision the franchise would become null and void. Misch said there was little use of delaying the repairs as the company was fully informed of the requirements. He added that the trouble with the electric light system was that the franchise had not been followed strictly as the old wires had not been replaced with new ones as required and on rainy days the wires were short circuited on the wet trees. This trouble could be obviated, he said, if the franchises were enforced and wires strung and properly insulated.

The matter of having the water and gas mains under the improved streets in good condition has been brought home to the council for at the present time a part of the concrete on Ewing street is torn up to repair a leaky drain which should have been repaired when the improvement was made.

All the members of the council were present at the meeting Thursday night. Misch, chairman of the board of safety, reported that the chautauqua committee had requested three additional policemen at the park during chautauqua week. Upon his motion Fred Von Dielingen, Joseph Reinhart and Cornelius Riehl were appointed. Mr. Von Dielingen will go on duty at 10 a. m. and will remain at the park until 10 o'clock p. m. The others will be on duty from 6 o'clock p. m. until 6 a. m. This arrangement was made so that all three of the policemen would be at the park during the evening entertainments.

Davison introduced a resolution to improve Pine street from the North line of Sixth street to the south line of Seventh street with concrete curb and gutter. The property petitioned for this improvement several weeks ago. September 4 was set as the date for hearing remonstrances to the proposed improvement.

Upon motion of Davison, the street commissioner was instructed to place a tile in the ditch at the entrance of the city park.

Davison reported that the property owners on West Second street had complained of the escaping steam at the gas factory and upon his motion the city engineer was instructed to investigate and find some method of remedying the nuisance.

The councilmen entered into a discussion as to whether or not a permit should be granted to hitch horses inside the city park during chautauqua week. The majority of the members were opposed to granting the permit and arrangements were made where-by the chautauqua association could erect hitching racks outside the grounds.

Taskey asked that lights be placed in the Fourth Ward and Misch and Taskey were appointed a committee to investigate the request. The committee will report at the next meeting.

W. R. Day, Davison and Engineer Douglass were appointed as a committee to have some concrete work done on Laurel street. The curb and gutter was ordered in several months ago, but the work has never been done, it was stated. A concrete walk was also ordered along the property of Mrs. John Pfaffenberger on Jackson street.

Engineer Douglass reported that a change in the drainage system at the corner of Third and Walnut streets was necessary and was granted permission to use the street force to change the tiles. Davison, Misch and Sherman Day were appointed to investigate the return at the corner of Walnut and Third streets and also to arrange for removing a tree and two electric light poles at the corner of the Presbyterian church.

Upon motion of Misch, the following claims were allowed:

BOYS' AND GIRLS' POULTRY CONTEST SET FOR SEPT. 13

Lively Interest is Shown by Contestants in Second Annual Event.

The Parent-Teachers' Association of the Consolidated School has set Saturday, September 13, as the date for holding the second annual Boys' and Girls' poultry contest. The first was held at the Consolidated School last fall and attracted state wide attention because it was the first of its kind to be held in the United States. About forty-five contestants have entered which is a substantial increase in number over the first year. This indicates that the interest is gradually increasing. The contest is open to all boys and girls of the county and almost every township is represented.

The parents of the contestants take an active interest in the contest as they realize that it is a means of arousing greater enthusiasm in farm work and rural life. It furnishes employment for the boys and they are enabled to get some practical instruction in poultry raising. At the contest this year Prof. Phillips, head of the poultry department of Purdue University, will speak. The program has not been completed, but will probably be announced next week.

Under the plan adopted poultry raisers in the county donate one or more settings of eggs and these are distributed among the contestants. Prizes are offered for the largest number of chicks hatched from the setting, the largest bird and the highest scoring bird. Each setting is numbered and the name of the contestant is recorded. The entries are numbered and the judges are not informed who cared for the birds. Prizes are donated by persons who desire to see the success of the contest.

INDIANA APPLES TAKE FIRST PLACE AT CLEVELAND SHOW

Hoosier Product Given High Recognition at International Exhibit.

At the annual convention and apple show of the International Apple Shippers' Association held at Cleveland last week, Indiana won third prize in the competition for the best and most comprehensive exhibit of apples from a group of eight southwestern states. The winning exhibit, the only one representing Indiana, was from the orchard of J. M. Zion, of Clarks Hill. The display included about thirty commercial varieties taken from the trees on August first. Excepting summer apples, the exhibits were of immature fruit shown for the purpose of indicating to apple shippers the quality of the mature 1913 crop.

Besides taking a prize for good apples, Indiana was honored at the Apple Shippers' meeting in the election of R. H. Pennington, a commission merchant of Evansville, as President of the Association. The election of Mr. Pennington by a body of the keenest apple dealers from every state in the union and from the principal foreign countries is particularly interesting because he was chosen to direct the work of the association in a year when many important policies relating to the marketing, distribution and advertising of the apple are to be shaped.

Among the tasks of the apple shippers for 1914 is a great advertising campaign, the slogan of which is "Advertise the Apple." $250,000 will be spent in suggesting often and forcefully to the public that "an apple a day is health's best way," and in educating apple consumers in the uses and qualities of certain varieties of apples. The committee will turn our thoughts appraised frequently on the principal that mental suggestions of the goodness of the fruit will greatly increase its consumptions.

Indiana has been an active advertiser of the apple for the past three years through the annual Indiana Apple Show. The show management is planning to make known the facts concerning Indiana's apple orchards not only by exhibits from the best of the apple harvest but by carefully compiled facts and figures on the cost of production and the income from cultivated orchards. The Third Annual Show will be held at Indianapolis, November 5-11.

The League of Lost Causes

By H. M. EGBERT

Being the Romantic Adventures of Paul Lane, American Millionaire

The Education of Edward

(Copyright, 1913, by W. G. Chapman.)

AND this, I suppose, will be the last meeting of the club," said his majesty, King George of England, rising with a yawn and buttoning up his gloves.

"The last regular meeting sir," answered Lord Claude Tresham, secretary to the organization. "The premises will always be open."

"But for more convivial purposes," put in ex-King Manuel of Portugal, laughing. "I regret to say that an immediate engagement."

"Manuel," interrupted the English monarch, clapping the young fellow upon the shoulder, "we owe you much gratitude. By detaching yourself from this criminal league you have put an end to its activities in Europe. When the Tsar withdrew his support you were the last prop left. And now—"

"Well, I did think it could get me back my throne," said Manuel, yawning. "And naturally I was not greatly averse to using it as a means toward that end. But now, if you will pardon me, a most important affair of state makes my presence imperative, and so—"

"It's curious," observed King George, lingering at the door. "It's up in a night and lost its influence in a day. When Professor Dvornak propounded his plan for the revival of aristocracy he had an immediate response from half the rulers of Europe. I confess that for a time he influenced me. I believe the league would have effected its purposes, too, had it not been used by base men for their own purposes, and sunk to the level of an anarchistic organization, thus compelling us to form a counter league to thwart it. And that we have succeeded is due entirely to you, Tresham."

"And to Paul Lane," said Tresham. "The American millionaire?"

"Yes, sir. He, too, was entrapped into joining the league and aiding it with his money, principally through the influence of her highness the Princess Clothilde of Austria. He came over to us when he learned the true nature of the society, and has since done all in his power to aid us. And I have hopes that the princess herself will join in giving the league the coup de grace."

"A very remarkable woman, the Princess Clothilde," said King George thoughtfully. "I know her well and hope to see her often now that she has abandoned Dvornak and his fellow conspirators. As for this Lane—where is he?"

"Not far from here, sir," answered Lord Claude.

"Well, you must bring him to see me next time we are both in Paris. Do you go my way, Manuel?" he continued, turning to the Portuguese sovereign.

"No, cousin. I have a most pressing appointment on weighty matters of state," replied the other, and vanished without further ceremony down the same stairs by which King George soon afterward took his departure.

It was in the private dining room of Monsieur Gabriel, in Paris. Seven kings had attended what was to be the last session of their club. Formed by the staid heads among the European rulers, to combat the perilous activities of the league, it had accomplished its purpose. The league was on its last legs. And Paul Lane, who had opposed it with all his resources, had been mainly instrumental in securing its overthrow.

Lord Claude Tresham stepped back to the mantel and lit a cigarette.

"I wonder," he mused, as he puffed out a cloud of fragrant smoke, "I wonder just how soon King George will learn that his heir has been kidnapped!"

He strode across the room and pulled back the curtain which separated the dining room from that of the attendants.

"Paul!" he called, "come in."

Paul Lane, in waiter's garb, which was converted into conventional evening dress by the removal of the napkin protruding from his waistcoat, entered and took the cigarette which the other handed him.

"I wanted you to hear our conversation tonight, Paul," said Lord Tresham, "because I have good reason to believe that the activities of the league are not wholly ended. In fact, they have succeeded in pulling off a most daring coup. Prince Edward of Wales was kidnapped two hours ago."

"In Paris?"

"Yes, from the town house of the Marquis de Breteuil, whose guest he has been, as you know, for several months, in order that he might become proficient in French. King George and Queen Mary arrived in Paris this afternoon incognito, to see their son. They visited the marquis' house and met the prince, and, being satisfied that all is right with him, will not expect to see him again until tomorrow. Between now and then the prince must be found. I have just learned the news from one of our agents. Nobody knows it yet, not even the Marquis de Breteuil."

"But is there no clue? What was the purpose of the conspirators?"

"The purpose, Paul, is wholly unknown to me. There does exist a clue, however. The Princess Clothilde, who, as you know, has resolved to oppose the league, but fears to do so openly owing to some hold which Von Holzrath, their leader, has over her, wishes to see you at midnight in the Cafe Celestiel, on the Boulevard Richepin—a famous haunt of actors and soubrettes. She sent me this message half an hour before the club convened. It was something of an ordeal to keep all knowledge of this affair from King George, as you may well imagine. Now the best thing you can do will be to follow up this clue. I rely implicitly in you, Paul—only remember, Prince Edward must be found by daybreak and restored to the house of the marquis before his father and mother get wind of the affair."

Paul did not delay a moment, but, clapping on his hat and struggling into his overcoat, he hurried down the stairs of Gabriel's and took a taxicab to the corner of the Boulevard Richepin. Arrived there, he dismissed the vehicle and proceeded afoot toward the cafe, reaching it just as a clock pealed the hour of twelve in announcement to twenty other clocks, which solemnly took up the sound.

The Cafe Celestiel was brilliant with lights and gay with diners. Men in evening dress and women in magnificent gowns, set off with flashing jewels, moved restlessly among those seated, or, seated themselves, sipped their liquors and chattered incessantly, while over the buzz of conversation rang out the lively strains of music. Paul, standing at the entrance, let his eyes wander over the throng. He scanned each face, but he did not detect that of Clothilde.

He noticed, however, that, though apparently engrossed in their own affairs, each couple looked furtively toward one central focus, on which all eyes were more or less directed, while he could hear low exclamations of astonishment among those nearest him. Following these glances, Paul suddenly found himself staring at a lad of about seventeen or eighteen years who, seated beside a loudly dressed woman, evidently an actress, was indulging in hilarious laughter due quite as much to wine as to amusement. Paul looked harder and then gasped in astonishment. This was Prince Edward. There was no mistaking that trim coat, of English cut, those patent leather shoes, topped with the white spats, and the very came with a dog's head, all of which had been familiarized to the Parisians through newspaper drawings and cartoons. And the woman was—Gabrielle de Soucy, the notorious actress whose indiscretions had formed the staple of Paris gossip ever since she entangled the ex-king of Portugal in her clutches and released him several thousand pounds the poorer.

"But it is indiscreet!" he heard a woman near him murmur to his companion. "To princes much is forgiven—but to parade himself thus, here!"

"Oh!" murmured the man, rolling up his eyebrows in affected horror. "If his royal mother knew—that Puritan lady of England! Mon Dieu! Doubtless she thinks he is asleep in his bed at this hour."

"The marquis, his guardian, must be stark, raving mad to allow this," exclaimed the woman again.

Paul's eye caught that of the prince. He detected a distinct message in it. He moved toward the young fellow, puzzled, wondering, something in that glance made him dimly aware that he had seen him in the flesh, knew him. . . .

It was the Princess Clothilde, masquerading in the prince's clothes!

The shock of the discovery stupefied Paul. Quite quietly he sat down into the chair which the princess indicated to him. He saw the looks of the diners fixed on him; he felt amazed, helpless, out of his depth. But the pseudo-prince was talking more hilariously than ever, and the actress, apparently believing Paul to be one of the prince's friends, had already transfixed him with her languishing glances.

"No, no," hiccupped the prince, catching the glance. "No, he is not for you, my dear Gabrielle. This is a particular friend of mine, with whom I have an important engagement. You will pardon me if I leave you for one moment?"

"O, certainly," murmured Gabrielle, not in the most friendly tone. Evidently she suspected Paul of being an agent of the marquis, he thought.

Then, slipping out of the chair, Clothilde plucked Paul by the arm and motioned to him to follow into a dimly lighted corner, a little apart from the crowd. She sat down at a small table and Paul took his seat at her side.

"Clothilde, what folly is this?" he began harshly. "To masquerade in public while—"

"Hush, Paul!" she answered, and suddenly he perceived that there was a depth of passionate emotion under the feigned merriment. "Paul, when I told you that I was resolved to leave the league, I told you also that I must first work out my destiny, until I had crushed the league or till it had crushed me. Von Holzrath knows that am no longer an enthusiast in his cause. He offered me the choice between furthering his schemes and—ruin. I pretended to obey him; secretly I sent a message to Lord Tresham, making an appointment for you to meet me here, for I had heard you were in Paris. Now listen, Paul:

"They mean no harm to the prince. They want to set France and England by the ears—and what easier than to make England think that the young prince, who is a model of decorum, has fallen into evil ways and that the Marquis de Breteuil has been unfaithful to his trust? They know that King George and Queen Mary arrived incognito in Paris this afternoon to see their son. So they have kidnapped him for a few hours, meaning that I shall play his part with Gabrielle de Soucy in public. Tomorrow, when the prince is released, his story of kidnapping will be scouted; the king will take him back to England immediately, and public opinion in England will be aflame against France."

"I dared not refuse Von Holzrath, but I sent a message secretly, as you know."

"But where is the prince?" cried Paul.

"I do not know. I could not learn. Paul, for heaven's sake follow on his track, for I must go back and play my part again. Von Holzrath is ubiquitous, his spies may even now be pocket. He knew no one from whom to borrow in that region. It was almost as far to Lord Claude's abode as to that of the marquis. There was nothing to do but to wait. So he strode through the endless streets, crossed the Seine, and then proceeded through a mean region of little shops, while from time to time the pealing of the city clocks indicated the swift passage of the hours. It was nearly two before he stood at last in front of the old chateau in which the prince was harbored.

He knew his room! It had been indicated in many a diagram and plan in many a newspaper. It overlooked the avenue, and now Paul, standing directly under it, perceived that there was a light in the prince's window. And, as he looked up, straining his eyes to catch a clearer glimpse of the figure behind the curtain, suddenly the window was thrown wide open and the youthful figure of the prince looked out.

It was Prince Edward! There was no mistaking him! None could have mistaken that characteristic figure, that bright, English face, the profile—it was the prince complete, even down to the fashionable coat so often portrayed.

As Paul watched the prince turned round, the curtain fell, and the light went out.

He had come on a wild goose chase, and the true explanation of it

They were gathered in little groups and noisily discussing some topic of interest. Paul, seating himself close by, made out the tenor of the conversation with no difficulty.

"I wish I had been there!" moaned a shaggy-haired newspaper writer. "Just my luck to miss such an event! Tell me, Alphonse, just what occurred?"

"He was here at midnight with her—Mademoiselle de Soucy," he said. "Sapristi! they drank together for two hours, Mademoiselle and the prince, till both were tipsy. And he flaunted himself so daringly, Messieurs, in his English coat and his patent leathers, yes, even to the dog's-head cane that all Paris has learned to know. He won all hearts, this English prince. And then, just as we were wondering whether or not he would roll under the table, up steps—who do you think? Manuel of Portugal?"

"Ciel! What a meeting! And then?"

"When Mademoiselle perceived him she grew pale as death and rose from the table with a little cry of fear, and stood facing the ex-king with arms stretched out as though to shield the boy prince from his wrath. And the prince rose, too, and looked upon Manuel with calm dignity—the dignity of a prince, an English prince, Messieurs. And then Manuel walked up to the prince and, taking off his gloves nouse. He must decide immediately. If he set out at once he could reach the duelling ground some fifteen minutes before the appointed time.

The pale light of the summer morning had already begun to make the trees and paths distinguishable when Paul arrived at the gate of the Bois nearest to the duelling ground. It was twenty minutes to five. He quickened his steps, directing them toward the little glade. At last he reached it—thank God, it was empty—and, flinging himself down upon the dewy grass, he rested. His limbs ached and his head was swimming; his eyes were heavy from want of sleep. He needed all his strength to control himself. He must act wisely, swiftly and say not one rash word.

Presently a flaccid rattle up and halted in the middle of the near-by carriage drive, and two men stepped out of it. Almost immediately it was followed by another, which, halting in the identical spot, disgorged three others. Through the bushes behind which he lay concealed Paul could see, in the rapidly increasing light, that the first two men were Manuel and his second; the other three were the supposed prince, his second, and a man who carried a little black case and was evidently a doctor.

The parties saluted formally, and the man with the case stepped forward and communed for a while with Manuel's second. Then, being joined by their parties, they stationed them in chosen places, some fifteen paces apart. And, as the man with the case opened it, Paul perceived to his horror that the case did not contain surgical supplies.

It contained two pistols. This was evidently to be a duel a l'outrance. And one of the combatants would fall, killed, or perhaps mortally wounded.

That the duel was to be a serious one was evinced from the fact that the combatants were set facing each other, and not back to back, as is commonly done in encounters when only honor is sought. The principals raised their pistols; the seconds took their stations. The man with the case, half between the two, raised a white handkerchief.

"One!" he counted.

Suddenly Paul saw a third carriage, driven at a furious pace, dash down the drive and come to a halt fifty yards away. A middle-aged gentleman and a lady, primly dressed, descended, and, perceiving what was taking place, began running wildly toward the combatants.

"Two!" shouted the man in the middle.

Paul bounded from the underbrush. "Put up your weapons!" he yelled in French. And the five, startled by this sudden appearance and still more unceremonious command, obeyed.

"Monsieur!" exclaimed the man with the handkerchief, as Paul stumbled toward him, "this is most unseemly. If you—"

"Well done! Well done!" shouted the middle-aged man, finding his voice as he staggered into the middle of the group, leaving the lady tottering in the rear. "Just in the nick of time. Edward!"

But if the others were disconcerted the middle-aged man was more discomfited than they. He seemed to totter backward; his eyes stared through their heavy fringes, and his mouth opened and remained open. The lady, who joined the group at that moment, seemed paralyzed with fear. She sank to the ground, sobbing. The gentleman raised her in his arms and, turning upon the group with an expression of sternness, said:

"That man is not my son."

Round the bend of the drive came a fourth carriage, and before it stopped a young man leaped from it and came bounding, lithe as a deer, across the grass, shouting as he advanced. He burst into the midst of the assembled company and clasped his mother in his arms. And the rest, entirely overcome by the crescendo of these unparalleled circumstances, only looked wildly at one another. They could not find their tongues.

It was really astonishing how little they resembled each other—the true prince and the false. If clothes make the man, they had certainly made the prince in the minds of the Parisians. For, save that each wore a trim English coat and patent leather boots and spats, and carried a cane with a dog's head, there was astonishingly little resemblance between the true Prince Edward, with his arms round his sobbing mother, and the false Prince Edward, still holding the duelling pistol.

"I heard that you had come here to look for me, father," exclaimed the prince. "What does it mean? They sent a telephone message to the marquis' house—"

"Who sent it?"

"The 'Daily Star.' They told the marquis that I had been out all night in a cafe, that I was to fight a duel, that you had come to Paris and had been warned to be in the Bois, and so I—what does it mean?"

Queen Mary picked herself up and came forward, her eyes boring like steel augers into Clothilde's face.

"Who is that woman, masquerading as my son, the prince?" she asked.

Then, rising to the occasion, Paul stepped forward, doffing his hat with his politest smile.

"It means, Madam," he said, "that a cinematograph picture was to be taken in the Bois, and that one of the chief actors unfortunately adopted a dress too similar to your son's."

"Ha!" snorted King George incredulously. "Where is your camera, sir?"

"I left it in the cab," replied Paul deferentially. "The cabman took it in charge because I had forgotten my money."

"Who is that woman, masquerading as my son, the prince?"

watching me. It is madness to be seen talking with you."

"One moment, Gabrielle thinks you the prince? It is incredible that a woman should be deceived."

"No, Paul. She is but playing her part. She knows nothing of the plot and thinks the whole thing a wager, wherefrom she is to reap ten thousand francs for aiding in the jest. Now I must go." She rose.

"But the prince," Paul cried again in desperation. "Give me some clue."

"I cannot, Paul. Ask at the house of the marquis. That is all I can suggest. I must go, Paul—forgive me."

For a fraction of a moment he felt her hand in his, and then he knew that, whatever the part which she must play, her love was his. Some day, when all their sufferings were ended, he would take her home with him, to dwell in peace and quiet for all their lives in his own land. Home! The thought, the memory of it burned in his heart and gave him new resolution. He buttoned his coat tightly and hurried away from the restaurant toward the marquis' town house.

But it was five miles from the Cafe Celestiel to that fashionable neighborhood where the Marquis de Breteuil resided, and Paul, when about to hail a taxicab, discovered to his consternation that he had no money in his suddenly flashed through his mind. Von Holzrath, the soul and cunning inspiration of the league, distrusting Clothilde, had merely pretended that the prince had been kidnapped, in order that she might reveal the story and spread the rumor, they incidentally throwing his enemies off their guard. Paul had not credited the man with so much originality. In the midst of these rumors, which would doubtless be communicated to King George, who would believe the prince's own story that he had spent the night quietly at home, when the newspapers would be full of his night adventure in the Cafe Celestiel? Truly Von Holzrath had hit upon a cunning scheme, and one which far transcended the vulgar vice of kidnapping the heir apparent.

Paul's resolution was made up in an instant. He must hurry back to the Cafe Celestiel, acquaint Clothilde with the truth about the affair, and force her, by any means in his power, to accompany him to Lord Claude's house and there reveal the details of the conspiracy.

The Cafe Celestiel was still brilliant with lights, and the band still played, but the cafe itself was almost empty. A few newcomers lazily slipped their absinthe there—shabby folks, night birds, journalists and writers who kept irregular hours.

in a leisurely way, folded them together and struck Prince Edward across the face. And then men sprang between them and—

"A duel!" exclaimed the shaggy-haired journalist. "Mon Dieu! Where will it be?"

"None knows. They went off with their seconds in two taxicabs, leaving poor Mademoiselle de Soucy alone and half hysterical. But it is certain that they will fight before morning."

Paul sprang to his feet in horror. A duel! Clothilde, in a boy's garb, engaged in a fencing bout with the infuriated young man who had been ruler of Portugal!

He made his way drunkenly toward the corner in which he and Clothilde had sat. A scrap of paper was lying upon one of the chairs. Paul opened it mechanically and saw a scrap of writing upon it. He read:

"The little park in the Bois at five."

The blood tingled in his veins. Clothilde, in the supreme moment of the challenge, had, then, found time somehow to indite that note to him, knowing that he would come back, and trusting that he would discover it. Paul knew the little park—an unfrequented glade, one of the score and more in which duellists met to settle their differences.

It was a quarter before four. He had no time to go to Lord Tresham's

It was reported here Thursday afternoon that Frank Williams, who slashed William Gasaway with a knife during a fight at Uniontown several days ago, had been arrested after a hard fight. It was rumored that he had shot two men who were making the arrest. The report, however, was without foundation as Williams has not been arrested and has not been seen around Uniontown since the fight occurred.

TY TINKER.

Ty Tinker, the philosopher of Beaver Creek, spent a short time here today while returning home after a pleasant and enjoyable visit with his host of friends and acquaintances at Nawbone. Around his native town he has a reputation as a political diagnostician and gives considerable attention and study to local conditions at Beaver Creek. During his conversation here today the following gems of thought were gathered up and preserved:

"Politics is one o' th' most complicated inventions since th' discovery o' th' mule, but th'ere as necessary to th' successful manipulation o' our various institutions o' government as a governor on a engine. In fact, it would be hard to run our present government if it wuzn't fer politics. Politics is a kind o' disease. They spread rapidly every two years an' when they once git a good start everybody catches 'em an' th'ere hard to stop.

"Politics can be found in every locality. Beaver Creek is a hot bed fer 'em and we've just had some warm times 'cause o' th' management o' th' municipal affairs. Our last mayor wuz the Hon. Lin Mossy and he wuzn't satisfactory. He wuz one o' them good, jolly congenial fellers who can call every body by their first name and when it comes to campaignin' he's a shark. Why actually, he got more votes in one ward than there wuz voters. But as a pilot o' a municipal ship he fell short o' qualifyin'. Lots o' citizens wuz afraid that he'd run th' city's ship on th' rocks before his administration ended an' everybody gave a sigh o' relief when he completed th' work o' his term.

"At one time our ward got dissatisfied with th' way he wuz carryin' on an' appointed me to interview him. I just walked up to him kind o' bold like one day and told him I'd been appointed to represent th' taxpayers o' our ward an' we wuz not pleased with certain things. He handed me a long, black cigar, patted me on th' back an' sed he'd always been a good an' loyal friend o' mine an' fer me not to worry. I guess he didn't want to talk 'bout th' complaints fer he asked me how all th' folks wuz gettin' along an' fore I knowed it I been there with him a hour an' he sed he'd have to go. So I didn't git to tell him about the kicks in our ward th' time but I'm to see him soon.

"He's one o' th' slickest fellers you ever saw when it comes to gettin' votes. When th' campaign wuz at its height th' wet an' dry issue wuz raised an' all four o' th' candidates sed they wuz fer absolute law enforcement. Tabithie, th'et's my wife, wuz president o' th' Woman's Wine Extermination League an' she got real interested in th' campaign when th' temperance question come up. The Hon. Mossy got wind o' th' new turn o' affairs an' so he went up to our house an' told Tabithie that he had been a life-long resident o' Beaver Creek, wuz vitally interested in th' comin' generation an' firmly believed that it wuz necessary to make the saloons live up to the law an' if he wuz elected he'd see that all gamblin' wuz stopped an' th' gamblers chased out o' town. He sed these great moves could only be made by th' unswervin' support o' th' members o' th' society an' it wuz incumbent upon them to see that their husbands and sweethearts voted fer him.

"Tabithie sed she liked Mossy's attitude an' called a special meetin' th' next mornin' to discuss th' situation. She told th' members what Mossy had sed an' it wuz voted to give him their support. Now some o' th' husbands o' th' members o' th' society didn't believe that way but fer th' sake o' preservin' peace an' harmony in th' household they promised their wives to vote fer th' society's candidate.

"Some o' us men got together on th' grocery corner one night to talk th' question over an' while we wuz talkin' up walks Mossy. We told him right out what th' meetin' wuz fer an' he laughed one of his hearty laughs an' sed fer us not to worry, th'et everything would come out all right in th' end, fer if he wuz elected he'd see that our personal interests wuz protected. We didn't exactly like his attitude 'cause we wuz afraid he'd double cross us. A feller th'et'll fool your wife or anybody else's wife will just as soon fool you. But he had th' women folks workin' fer him all right an' fore th' election they talked 'bout how Beaver Creek would be advertised as th' cleanest an' most moral city in th' United States an' how families who wanted to raise their boys in wholesome surroundin's would move there as soon as they heard 'bout th' model Mayor.

"On election day everything wuz bubblin' over with excitement. The front doors o' all th' saloons wuz closed tight an' th' women sed there'd be no booze sold that day 'cause Mossy had sed th'et th' law would be enforced. I started to th' polls in th' mornin' an' met Mossy on th' way. He sed he wuz countin' on me to support him, but I told him I'd not made up my mind fer certain. Then he pulled a big roll o' one-dollar bills from his pocket an' peeled off one fer me an' sed fer me to stand near the polls fer a few minutes an' help him out. I told him I'd go in an' vote fer him 'fore I went on duty an' he smiled an' sed all right. I stayed 'round th' votin' place 'bout a hour an' it seemed to me like th' candidate hired every feller th'et came up. They wuz all undecided until they accepted employment. Some o' th' fellers didn't take any money an' so he took them 'cross th' street in a little room. They all come out laughin' an' smackin' their lips, an' at times they had to run 'cross th' street to keep out o' th' way o' th' brewery wagons th'et wuz driven up there all day long. The candidate kept tellin' th' boys what a good official he'd make and some of them laughed an' sed they wuzn't so certain fer a feller th'et kept tootin' his own horn so long would soon git winded.

When th' votes wuz counted at night it was found th'et Mossy had been elected. Fer three hours th' saloons give 'way beer. They sed it didn't cost them anything 'cause th' gamblers paid fer it. The women didn't like this one bit, but excused th' condition by sayin' th'et a newly elected mayor couldn't reform th' town in a day. They sed they would look fer better things. Th'ere still lookin' an' nothin' wuz in sight when Mossy left th' office.

"Fore the new mayor wuz in office long th' saloons started a all-night schedule an' three or four new gambling joints opened up. Th' saloon keepers an' gamblers didn't seem a bit scared but th' mayor kept sayin' he wuz going to enforce th' law an' he did stop th' ridin' o' bicycles on th' sidewalk an' playin' ball in th' streets down town.

"Th' mayor told me confidential th'et pilotin' a city wuz hard work 'cause th' administration's clutch wuz liable to slip in th' reverse at any time. He sed a successful mayor would please all th' people he could an' then bunco th' rest. Th' candidate an' then bunco th' rest. A whole bunch o' us down at Beaver Creek are in th' rest crowd. Jest fore he went out o' office he didn't stay in town very much, but he sed he didn't mind th'et 'cause he didn't have to be bothered with hearin' so many complaints and his salary come just the same. Th' women wuz up in arms 'bout th' way th' mayor misrepresented his law enforcement tendencies an' Tabithie keeps sayin' to me "I told you so."
